Holly Loy is an associate attorney specializing in the field of trucking and transportation law. She pursued her higher education at Southern Illinois University, where she obtained her undergraduate degree in 1991. She went on to attend the University of Tennessee College of Law, where she graduated in 1998.

Beyond her professional achievements, Holly engages in a diverse range of hobbies, interests, and activities. She serves as the writing chair for the Atlanta Bar Association's semi-annual musical fundraiser, "A Courthouse Line." This event, benefiting the Atlanta Bar Foundation, combines her passion for both the legal profession and the performing arts.

Additionally, Holly is a founding member and performer of Cineprov!, an improvisational comedy troupe. She has also had an exciting venture outside the legal realm. She has been a former "walker" on the popular television series The Walking Dead. She has a flair for baking and cake decorating, and she enjoys the art of costume design.
